Composer Notes

Long Ago in Depths of Winter

This Christmas song should have a quiet, homely feel. It is intended to be well within the capacity of a small parish choir and music group. The instruments available in our parish of Mildenhall, Suffolk, for its first rendition were flute and violin, but recorders are used on the recording to emphasise the homely sound. If it is being sung for the first time, the assembly could be asked to listen to one or two verses before joining in. The melody does not take long to learn.
