Composer Notes

Søren Kierkegaard (1813–1855) said that the saint is someone whose life is about one thing. In the thirteenth century, Meister Eckhart wrote, “a just person is one who is conformed and transformed into justice.” Mildred Nevile, MBE (1927–2012), to whom this song is dedicated, was General-Secretary of the Catholic Institute for International Relations for 18 years. Her leadership inspired a generation, forged policy, and led to new development directions for international aid agencies, bringing about change from Latin America to South Africa. Her faithful friendship to so many of us remains a treasure.

The piece may be sung in different ways, with verses as printed or with the chorus repeated as an SATB chant when on the move. The trumpet part for this piece is a tribute to my much-loved uncle, jazz trumpeter, artist, and teacher, John McAndrew (1937–2012), whose way of life inspired us with joy. His New Orleans-style funeral was led by a jazz band of his friends through the streets of Wakefield, followed by many hundreds of people whose lives he had touched.
