Composer Notes

The idea for this piece first came to me while attending a Remembrance Service in Christ Church Cathedral, Oxford. The first reading was from the Book of Wisdom. Death is an affront to our innate desire for self-preservation, but to the Christian, it must also be seen as a coming home into the fullness of God's plan for us—one where there is no pain and suffering, and where all find peace and rest. The piece also draws from Revelation, where those who die in the Lord are truly blessed. While the third verse uses full choir, it works equally well with just a single voice taking the melody.
